

A PROMISED SENSATION

Begining Thursday morning, September 17, for one week we are going to place on exhibition in our store one of the largest, most elaborate and expensive stocks of Ladies

SUITS AND CLOAKS

It has ever been the pleasure of Astorian People to see.

WAIT, WATCH AND LEARN

Through our influential connections we have been able to obtain this splendid world of fashion and take the risk of bringing the stock to Astoria to show the ladies that there is one store in the city with backbone enough to give them something that only the big eastern stores are able to do.

We have been prompted in this stroke of enterprise to secure the world's best garments and place them within your reach, so that there will be no occasion for you to leave the city in order to secure your winter and fall suit or cloak.

The ladies will certainly hail this opportunity with the greatest delight. All we want you to do is to call at our store at the opening of the exhibit and see for yourself if what we say in this ad is not true. You need not necessarily buy, it will be a pleasure to us to show you what we can get when we go after it, and then at the same time you learn something of what others are going to wear this season.

TWO UNWISE GOVERNORS.

The governor of Montana is holding up the requisition of the governor of Missouri for a fugitive from justice and the governor of Nevada has refused to honor, except on condition, the requisition of the governor of California for the return of two escaped convicts. The excuse offered by the Montana governor is the alleged grounds of fear of there being back of the requisition a political conspiracy against the accused. The only reason assigned by the governor of Nevada for holding on to the California convicts is the matter of reward. In neither case is it alleged that there are irregularities on the part of the demanding governors and it is to be presumed that they complied strictly with the United States statutes governing inter-state extradition. It must also be presumed the governors of Montana and Nevada have decided to ignore the custom and law, as far as they dare, governing in extradition matters. Having so decided they must take the consequences. To say nothing of the disturbance of the comity between the states concerned, it is a very dangerous precedent. It advertises the states of Montana and Nevada as a refuge for criminals. The criminal cannot be punished in the state where found for crime committed in another state and to those who refuse to deliver up he will fly for the assurance of immunity from punishment.

The governor that refuses to honor the requisition of another governor shoulders a great responsibility and his state must answer for it. It is enough for the governor to know that the demand made on him is regular on its face. The law officers of the state from which the fugitive fled are better qualified to judge of the deserts of the offender than the governor of the state in which he has taken refuge. It is not the governor's province to inquire into the conditions existing in the demanding state. The requisition itself shows that a jury of twelve men have returned an indictment or that a complaint has been sworn out before a magistrate. It shows that the district attorney has investigated and endorsed the application and that the governor of the demanding state has certified to the authenticity of the proceedings. Further than to pass upon the regularity of the demand a governor has no authority to go. The fugitive held in Montana may belong to a respectable family of Missouri bootleggers, but the governor of Montana has no warrant for going beyond the requisition papers to make such inquiries. California may be poor pay but it is not within the province of the governor of Nevada to pass upon the former state's disposition to pay or shirk debts in considering the application for an extradition warrant.

Montana and Nevada have made the bid for hunted criminals to come within their borders for a haven of safety and they no doubt will get them.

Charles Wirkkala, who recently purchased The Louvre, intends to be "at home" to the public on next Saturday night, Sept. 19, 1903.

SEASIDE COUPLE MARRIED.

F. H. Lughton and Miss Nellie C. Stanley were married yesterday at the Occident by Rev. Harold Oberg, pastor of the First Methodist church. The contracting parties reside at Seaside, where they are well and favorably known.

A GREAT PROSPECT.

The A. Dunbar Company announces in another column a great suit and cloak sensation which bids fair to eclipse anything of its kind ever before attempted by any merchant in Astoria. Mr. Dunbar states that he has secured one of the largest and most expensive stocks of fashionable garments, ready-to-wear, that is possible for any store to obtain and will place it on exhibition for one week. This will give every lady in Astoria an opportunity to call and inspect the garments and learn what fine goods really are.

Mr. Charles Wirkkala, the new proprietor of The Louvre, will have a grand opening on next Saturday night, Sept. 19, 1903, to which the public are invited. Mr. Wirkkala is well known in Astoria and he wishes to see old friends and new ones on this occasion. Don't forget the date. s-15-19
